About this resource:

To prepare this activity, simply print and laminate the game mats. Players will need a dot cube and 20 manipulatives to cover their board. You can use plastic math cubes, mini erasers, or pom-poms.

Each player will need their own game mat. Before the game begins, players will place each of their 20 manipulatives on their game mat, one per white circle.

To decide which player begins the game, players will take turns rolling the dot cube once. The player who rolls the larger number goes first.

To Play: Players will take turns rolling the dot cube and counting to determine the number they rolled. They will pick/remove that many apples from the tree.

Players will continue to take turns rolling and picking apples until the first player removes all the apples from their tree.

To remove all the apples, the player must roll the exact number needed. For example, if a player has two apples left on their game board, they must roll a two to win the game.
